

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A portable terminal having a camera. The portable terminal comprises a jack interface connected to an external device, the external device being capable of selecting a 5 command for controlling at least one operation which is set in either a common mode or a camera mode during an operation; a control module for setting an operation mode to any one of the common and camera modes according to an inputted signal and for causing an image scanned through the camera to be photographed when the command is inputted from the external device during an operation in the camera mode; and a storing module for storing the 10 image photographed under the control of the control module.